Stuffing: Proper stuffing of the material in the container

Note:

Each quality (Cotton, Polyester etc.) of yarn must be produced separately from Blow room to winding to avoid contamination of foreign fibres, raw-white, dyed and dirty material etc.

Some textile fibres are highly hygroscopic and their properties change notably as a function of the moisture content. Moisture content is particularly critical in the case of properties, i.e yarn tenacity, elongation, yarn evenness, imperfections, count etc. Therefore conditioning and testing must be carried out under constant standard atmospheric conditions. The standard atmosphere for textile testing involves a temperature of 20+-2 degree C, and 65+-2% Rh. In tropical regions, maintaining a temperature of 27+-2 degree C, 65+-2%RH is legitimate. Prior to testing, the samples must be conditioned under constant standard atmospheric to attain the moisture equilibrium. To achieve this it requires at least 24 hours.
